Name	Short Description	Return Type	Parameters
printStage	prints if the game is in the first, second or third debate.	void- prints something based on the value of stagePrint.	There are no parameters
Title	prints the introduction of the debate based on if it is in the first, second or third debate.	void- The current stage and the topic of the debate.	There are no parameters.
openingStatement	shows the choices that the user will use for each debate stage. This will be called 3 times in the debate program for the 3 rounds.	void- Displays the list of statements that the user will use.	There are no parameters.
statement1	This shows up if the user chooses the first statement or [1] whether it is in the first, second or third debate.	void- Statement 1 based on if it is in the first, second or third debate.	There are no parameters.
statement2	This shows up if the user chooses the second statement or [2] whether it is in the first, second or third debate.	void- Statement 2 based on if it is in the first, second or third debate.	There are no parameters.
statement3	This shows up if the user chooses the third statement or [3] whether it is in the first, second or third debate.	void- Statement 3 based on if it is in the first, second or third debate.	There are no parameters.
statement4	This shows up if the user chooses the fourth statement or [4] whether it is in the first, second or third debate.	void- Statement 4 based on if it is in the first, second or third debate.	There are no parameters.
botResponse	This function is in charge of the responses of the Bot for all of the stages of the game.	void- The response of the bot	There are no parameters.

computeWin	This function determines the winner for each stage of the game.	void- the winner of the stage.	Player (integer) is the total score of Team ProgCC and Bot (integer) is the total score of Team Bot Annie Cal
Debate	The function responsible for the game's mechanics and uses all of the functions present in this program.	void- results of the debate.	There are no parameters.
main	The main function is responsible for the startup of the game and the activation of the Debate Function.	int - 0 - ends the game after the debate function ends.	There are no parameters.